Table of Contents

Editors' Preface

We would like to take the opportunity to acknowledge the various contributions from individuals and organisations which have led to the production of this book.

It is common practice to refer to a particular book through the names of those appearing on its covers. However, the real credit for the contents of this book goes to the many individual contributors. The contents represent the cumulative experience of its authors and their students, research workers, engineers and technicians, who formed and work in a unique organisation, the I.S.V.R. As Professor Large says in his introduction, the research carried out at the I.S.V.R. is dependent upon finance from external sources and without such sponsorship the knowledge presented in this book would have never been gained.

The transformation from authors' manuscript to the final production has been achieved through the dedication and cooperation of the secretarial and drawing office staff of the Institute.

We offer our sincere thanks to all who have been involved in so many ways.

R. G. White
J. G. Walker